+ The Economics = of Spirituality

The amazing part about "ordering" is that you can actively participate in ordering your life, or you can abdicate your ordering process to another, by consenting to their choice for you. Or, you can resign yourself to a random process, and let the chips fall where they may. What this ordering tool really accomplishes is to keep you conscious.

The economic turmoil we are experiencing right now is not the problem in our lives. Economic turmoil is the symptom of our spiritual bankruptcy. Suze Orman said it the best when she said, "PEOPLE FIRST, MONEY SECOND, THINGS THIRD." We have not lived the correct order to create a prosperous financial condition.

We can blame Wall Street, the mortgage industry, George Bush, Bill Clinton, whomever. Ultimately, we all have contributed or agreed to participate consciously or unconsciously in the financial condition of our lives and our country. Until our economic condition reached crisis proportions, we were uninterested in evaluating our intentions or our creative contributions.

I have compassion for those experiencing loss. It is no fun to lose. Clearly, many of us still prefer to learn through discomfort. As a culture, we have had an insatiable appetite for products and lifestyle expansion. We have lived outside of our means. We have been sleeping through our lives with no regard to the ramifications of the energetic contributions we have made to our families, our communities and our country. In my view, this is a blatant definition of spiritual bankruptcy. Reckless disregard of our intentions and our contributions to creative force.

In terms of the energy of prosperity and money, the universe is indiscriminate about who receives prosperity. Whoever can play the energy game effectively gets prosperity. You don't necessarily have to be a good person, a generous person, or a caring person. One way or another you have to have a sincere and honest relationship with money. One thing is clear to me, in order to create money you must care about it, and you must care about yourself. Those two pieces are non negotiable energetically. When Suze Orman said "treat money like a cherished friend," she meant it. You really have to do that to create a prosperous vibration in your space. People who love self even ego-centric individuals often have prosperity. They understand consciously or unconsciously about the focus and commitment to self which is necessary to be prosperous.

Recently I saw Rush Limbaugh on a Barbara Walters' special. I have nearly no ideological similarities with him. Barbara Walters posed the question to him "Here we are in a recession, and people are losing their homes, and jobs, and you just received a $100 million dollar signing bonus, and a salary of $38 million a year. How do you explain that?" His response was, "I choose not to participate in the recession." Although I don't resonate with Rush Limbaugh's ideology, he clearly has it right when it comes to money. He wants it, he believes he deserves, and he will claim it as his right. He remains unaffected by the external.

One step in the process that many metaphysicians skip over is the step of actively claiming what is theirs. We forget to actively work the energy in our space to "claim our good." Creating prosperity is not a passive process. The energy of prosperity moves very fast. It is very open. Passiveness is not open, or fast. It resonates on the same level with apathy. Lack of caring. Be awake, and be aware of what is in your creative mechanism. Be ready to shift, adjust, expand and change as necessary.

Another famous speaker is Joel Osteen. He is an evangelical Christian minister. Again, I do not agree with him ideologically on many issues. However, when it comes to prosperity, he gets it right. He says "God wants us to be prosperous and have wealth." What I tell people is rather than putting your energy into your worries about your condition, put your energy into expecting God to provide for you, because that's what "she/he" wants to do for you.

Just because we are metaphysicians and we understand much about social justice and why expansive vibrations are important, we need to work on remembering to ground our prosperity space. We have to claim it. We have to consciously open ourselves to it. We have to expect Source to provide it to us. In the process we have to love ourselves enough to believe we deserve it.

Look at your energetic life as a mathematical equation. If you only have 100 units of energy per day, and you spend 80 units of energy worrying, and fearing your circumstances then how much energy can you possibly have to create prosperity? Take the time to do the math in your own life. Do the math regularly. Practice "ordering it up" in your life to remain conscious. Our relationship with Source is always one of contribution. One exchange of energy for another. Be conscious of this relationship.

This year, 2009, when the energy of prosperity begins to stabilize again take the steps to ensure you are creating what you truly want to manifest in your life and in the world. Look at your creations/experiences. They will tell you where your true intentions lie. Clean up your creative mechanism. Stay awake in your life. Be conscious. You will live more authentically, happily and prosperously.

Have a wonderful New Year. Order up a good one! I look forward to talking and sharing with you over the coming year.

March 17th - Lance Ferguson - Math, science and snakes were Lance's first loves. He ate algebra for lunch and always earned A's in every math class. In Junior high and high school growing up in Oklahoma City, he had already taken all of the upper level math and science classes and was ready for something else to study. After college graduation, he pursued a career in radio and journalism, but Astrology came into his life in 1975 when he was 27 years old, and feeling lost. It was in June of that year when a dear woman he was dating who had also studied astrology read his natal astrological birth charts. The awareness that she had of his life and times, how he felt, and of the forces deep inside him, "blew him away."

He was compelled to begin the study of astrology. Within 10 years he was teaching beginning classes in astrology in Oakland, CA., and later he taught astrology at the University of Texas at Austin in the mid 90s.

In 1989, he began to write Skywatch. At first, it was just a daily exercise in talking about the heavenly hosts and signs. But when a woman with a radio program in SF called asking for an astrological piece for her radio show, he knew he had something that would work. Skywatch went on the radio that summer, and to this day, Skywatch is still on the radio in San Francisco on KEST, 1450 AM at 7 a.m. Mon-Wed. Now Lance begins a new chapter, broadcasting weekly on The Phyllis King Show.
